What would you like to say about the issue?

This has to be one of the most philistine pieces of planning vision yet to rear it's ugly head in Aberdeen. You need to forget all this glossy brochure wonderland you seem to be promoting. That means no more glass and concrete within a 5 mile radius of our city centre and no pandering to 'developers' whose only motive is shareholder profits. You need to start with the simple things. I live in the Castlegate and it has been shamefully treated by successive incompetent administrations. Half of it is taken up by a voluntary service organisation while the other half comprises of two pubs, a bookies, a criminal lawyers office and a charity shop. Marischall street has unnecessary double yellow lines all over it discouraging footfall and adding to the downward spiral. I could go on all day but do not have the time. The Victorians gave us a great architectural legacy and we need to start here with it's restoration and sensitive development. The Marischall Square fiasco however shows the dead hand of this present administration and should serve as a future warning for future city centre development as to decisions taken by amateurs based on the 'developers' glossy brochure promotions.

What change would you like to see made?

All decision making on future city centre developments removed from council administration officials. We have a planning department not worthy of the name.
